I have just noted this, recently published by the International Financial Reporting Standards Foundation:

The IFRS Foundation Trustees have today announced the establishment of an Eminent Persons Group, chaired by Jean-Claude Trichet, to provide strategic advice and counsel to the Trustees on the proposed formation of the International Sustainability Standards Board and its connectivity with jurisdictional initiatives.

The Eminent Persons Group membership is:

- Chair: Jean-Claude Trichet, former President of the European Central Bank;
- Sheila Bair, former Chair of the US Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation;
- Nandan Nilekani, Chair and co-founder of Infosys;
- Guillermo Ortiz, former Governor of Banco de Mexico; former Chair of the Bank of International Settlements; and
- Min Zhu, former Deputy Managing Director of the International Monetary Fund.

The Eminent Persons Group has held its first meeting and will have regular engagement with the Trustees. Its work complements other working groups and committees established by the Trustees to support their work to determine the IFRS Foundation's role in sustainability-related financial disclosures:

I know the new board is advising on sustainability reporting, but surely someone who knew something about sustainability might have been of use on there? Or is this not really about sustainability at all?
