

Tax justice and tax transparency in 2021

Published: January 13, 2026, 5:15 am

In its eighteen or so years in existence, the tax justice movement has always campaigned for tax transparency. So, it has delivered country-by-country reporting for tax, and led the calls for that data to be made public. And it has tackled the opacity of tax havens.

But, building on those successes is essential and tax transparency is a much bigger issue than this focus on multinational corporations and tax havens suggests. It is very much a domestic tax issue as well, permeating the whole way the tax system works and how it delivers fair outcomes. In 2021 I suggest it's time tax justice thinks more widely on tax transparency and in this video I explain why.

<https://youtu.be/26OdKglza1w>

For more thinking on this issue see
<https://www.taxresearch.org.uk/Blog/2021/04/07/making-tax-work/>

The other four videos in this series are here, here, here and here.