

Covid is not over

Day 4 and I am no longer feverish or anything very much, except deeply fatigued. I take paracetamol and it gets better. As the dose wears off it gets very much worse. It feels like I have been drained of every gram of adrenaline. And there is a heatwave coming.

As I noted on Twitter this morning, those in the media who parrot the government line that Covid is all over are fools, and liars. It is not.

The same people will also be saying we have to learn to live with extreme heat in the next few days. No we don't. We have to change our behaviour. But apparently nothing, but nothing, must get in the way of excess material consumption by a few. I despair. And I have probably knocked my sats by a couple of per cent saying so.
