

Funding the Future

Labour needs a crash course in complex systems thinking...

Published: January 13, 2026, 3:14 pm

This is the third thread by other people I want to share here this morning. This one is by Dr Nafeez Ahmed, who is absolutely right to say Labour has an enormous amount of thinking and changing to do if it is to come close to changing the world we live in. Links are in the original tweets.

Dr Nafeez Ahmed FRSA

@NafeezAhmed

...

I've spent 2 decades studying dynamics of societal crisis & collapse. It's now clear that Liz Truss is leading Britain into a convergence of crises that is likely to culminate in an unprecedented social and economic collapse bylinetimes.com/2022/10/14/bri...
@BylineTimes

bylinetimes.com

Britain is Sleepwalking into Societal Collapse – Byline Times

The sacking of the Chancellor is a symptom of the escalating incoherence of Liz Truss' Government – not a sign that it is changing course to become more ...

4:56 PM · Oct 14, 2022 · Twitter Web App

1,798 Retweets 284 Quote Tweets 3,622 Likes

Dr Nafeez Ahmed FRSA

@NafeezAhmed · Oct 14

...

Replying to @NafeezAhmed
This crisis will cascade across government, economy, housing markets, energy, health, the judiciary and beyond. And it could trigger another global financial crash, worse than 2008. one that, like that crash, could have potentially irreversible impacts on global civilisation. /2

6

101

395

Dr Nafeez Ahmed FRSA

@NafeezAhmed · Oct 14

...

Kwarteng's sacking after 38 days in office will not reverse these prospects. It signals a systemic level of incoherence the only outcome of which, at this stage, can be continued breakdown. The danger is that it brings the rest of Britain down with it. /3

Page 1/1