Yesterday's post on anger was quite popular, and that is continuing this morning. These are the page views, and since it was the only post yesterday most are for it:

I am surprised: I posted it with some trepidation as it was more personal than usual; could have been accused of generalising a group (an issue some raised) and I took a while to get to the argument. But it seems it resonated.

There was one just difference in my approach, which was that this post was shared on Mastodon, where it seems to have really taken off. I am on Mastodon. I intend to share all posts there from now on. The link to my account is in the right-hand column, adjacent to this.
