

The march of fascist control continues

As the Guardian reports this morning:

Police are to be given powers to shut down protests before any disruption begins under Rishi Sunak's plans for a public order crackdown, which aim to prevent tactics such as "slow marching".

Sparking outrage from civil liberties campaigners, the government said it would be laying an amendment to the public order bill to toughen its crackdown on "guerilla" tactics used mainly by environmental protesters.

New legislation proposed by Suella Braverman is already draconian: a person could be issued with a five-year control order under it to prevent them protesting. Now the crime is to be extended to planning protest.

George Monbiot is good on this. I share this video made before these new powers were proposed again. I was made last November. This is fascist control in action. The video in the tweet should be live:
