

The NHS funding crisis - in The Mirror this morning

My new report on funding the NHS, out this morning, also features in today's Mirror newspaper:

In fact, my report in this issue developed for publication this weekend precisely because the Mirror expressed interest on Wednesday this week in this work, which I was in the course of developing as a blog, with all the data having then been done by then. It came up in conversation when I was in discussion with them on another story.

What was a blog then became a report and a video with the aim of showing that political parties in the UK need to get real on the scale of the NHS funding crisis and need to begin to talk seriously about the range of options available to tackle that issue. The Mirror clearly shares that view.
