AN UPDATE: This has been cancelled because Nicola Surgeon has resigned.

I am on my way to Pitlochry this morning. It's a 430 mile trip. The reason is that I will be appearing on Debate Night on BBC Scotland tonight, which is being recorded this evening at the Pitlochry Festival Theatre for broadcast at 10.30pm on BBC Scotland. You can get it in the rest of the UK on iPlayer. Just look for BBC Scotland.

For those not familiar with it, Debate Night is the BBC Scotland equivalent of Question Time. The format is pretty similar. Five guests, three of whom are politicians, face questions from the audience that they then have to comment upon.

It should be fun.

I am also looking forward to a little time in Pitlochry itself. It is many years since I last visited, and then for a concert at the same theatre.
