A number of people have been asking how they might find out what is going on with the blog quicker than they might by waiting for the email notifications that come out once a day.

On a phone or iPad this can be done using the Feeder.co app. I only use Mac equipment but believe the Android method is pretty similar.

I searched for the app on the App Store:

Downloading and installing it required that I know my Apple ID password, but was no more complicated than that. Getting it installed only took a couple of minutes, after which it was in my apps:

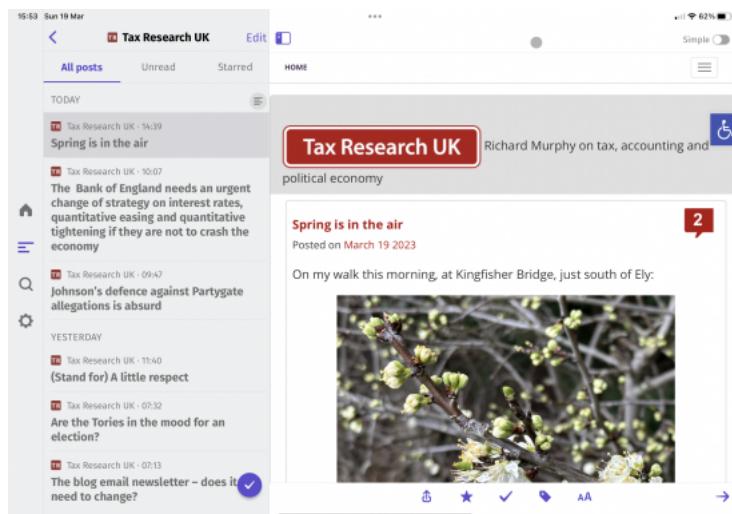

I then used the search function to find the tax.research.org.uk feeds:

I clicked the follow buttons for the main and comment feeds.

Within a couple of minutes the app was working:

This will not be for everyone, but it is a way to get the blog regularly and seems pretty efficient.
