

Should this blog be renamed?

One of the comments made over the last few days is that if I want to increase the reach of this blog it needs a new name.

Way back in 2006, when the story began, most articles were on tax. These days, most are not.

So, a poll follows.

But what should a new name be? I tried this:

Political Economy UK

That is a lot more accurate now. But is there something better?

And, for those concerned, the web address would not change. That is far too embedded for anything to happen to it.
