Jeremy Hunt is supposedly going to announce measures to get those over the age of 50 who have dropped out of the workforce back to work.

To do this he is apparently going to increase the annual pension contribution limit to £60,000, up from £40,000. He is also going to increase permissible pension pots from just under £1.1 million to maybe £1.8 million.

This is undoubtedly going to help some senior doctors. But is it really going to attract almost anyone else back to work? I personally doubt it. But just in case, a poll for the over 50s (please):
