I got this email yesterday, from the inspiring campaigners called 'Led by Donkeys':

On Monday night Nigel Farage finally admitted that "Brexit has failed".

Of course he's doing his best to blame others for how it's been delivered but it's hard to think of anyone who bears more responsibility for Brexit than Farage himself.

This feels like a moment. We're finally at a point where the country can agree that Brexit was a mistake. Farage's friends in the right-wing press will no doubt spin his admission into something else, which is precisely why we want to get his words up in towns and cities across the country.

Chip in here to get Farage's words up on giant billboards across the country

(mock up of what the posters will look like)

In 2016 they said "Take Back Control". In 2019 they said "Get Brexit Done". Well now we want them to own a new three-word-slogan: "Brexit Has Failed".

We've spoken to some billboard companies and if we bulk buy we can get them down to about £500 per site. We've set an initial target of 20 but there's no reason why we can't get to 50 or indeed 100. Every penny raised goes directly into putting these posters up and having countless people see those words from "Mr Brexit" himself.

There's a long way to go to undo the damage Farage and his pals have done, but the country agreeing that their Brexit project has been an abject failure is a good place to start.

Let's pay for billboards across the country making Farage own his failure

The argument's now over. Let's get the word out across the country.

If you have a spare fiver it seems like a moment to get the message out.
