

Where do the Tories think their populist agenda will en...

Published: January 17, 2026, 12:41 am

I watched this extract from a speech by Katharine Birbalsingh at the National Conservative conference yesterday. I think you should to. Only by doing so can you get a sense of what this is all about.

<https://twitter.com/natcontalk/status/1658134915202834433?s=61&t=fQEnD35XLiGihXLT1M1wyA>

There is a fever in the manner of her address that reminds me very strongly of something that I would rather hope was long in the past.

The content only confirms my fears.

This is populist nationalism of what I think to be an extremely dangerous sort.

Three questions then.

First, do the Tories know what they are doing?

Second, if they do, what are their goals?

Third, where do they think this will end?

Worry, I say.