

The racists are winning in the US. We urgently need to ...

I noticed this in an email from the New York Times this morning:

In a 6-3 decision, the Supreme Court rejected race-conscious affirmative action at colleges and universities, declaring that admissions programs at Harvard and the University of North Carolina were unlawful and sharply curtailing a policy that had long been a pillar of higher education.

They added:

Effects: Student populations of elite institutions are all but certain to become whiter and more Asian and less Black and Latino. The decision could complicate diversity efforts elsewhere, narrowing the pipeline of highly credentialed minority candidates and making it harder for employers to consider race in hiring.

This is quite frightening, and the obvious consequence of Trump having been able to appoint so many Supreme Court Judges.

Democracy is being undermined in the US by judges intent on promoting policy that looks to promote division in society.

Yesterday, judges here in the UK ruled against the government on its policy to send refugees to Rwanda.

We should value the freedom our judiciary still have whilst they enjoy it. We can be quite sure that there are those who would wish to curtail it or pack the courts with their cronies.
