

AI as a campaigning tool

Published: January 12, 2026, 11:35 pm

I gave ChatGPT this instruction this morning:

Write a letter to Rishi Sunak, saying that he is wrong to delay proposals for green cars and heat pumps in the UK.

This is what I got back:

Dear Mr. Sunak,

I hope this letter finds you well. I am writing to express my concerns and disagreement with the proposal to delay the implementation of green cars and heat pumps in the UK. While I understand that there may be economic considerations at play, I believe that prioritizing these initiatives is crucial for our nation's future.

The urgency of addressing climate change cannot be overstated. Delaying the transition to green cars and heat pumps risks exacerbating environmental issues and puts us further behind in meeting our carbon reduction targets. The world is moving towards sustainable energy solutions, and the UK should not fall behind.

Investing in green technologies not only helps combat climate change but also creates jobs and stimulates economic growth. It's an opportunity to lead in innovation and secure a cleaner, more sustainable future for generations to come.

I respectfully urge you to reconsider delaying these proposals and instead focus on accelerating the transition to green transportation and heating solutions. Our environment, economy, and future generations depend on it.

Thank you for your attention to this critical matter.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

Not perfect, but a good start.

AI as a campaigning tool is worth thinking about.
