

Labour only needs one Brexit policy - which is to build...

According to the Guardian:

Keir Starmer has committed to pursuing a major rewrite of the Brexit deal with the EU if Labour is elected, citing his responsibility to his children and future generations.

However, as they note:

He ruled out rejoining the EU, the customs union and the single market.

So, he's not serious in that case because those and freedom of movement are the things that are so obviously needed. Anything else is tokenism.

The best thing that can be said about this is that the failure to deliver is being built in early and is even being pre-announced ahead of the election.

What is Labour for?
