I have long felt that the UK has little future. Whatever once held the four very disparate countries* within it together will not, I think, endure for much longer.

So, which country will be the first to leave the UK, whatever the Tories and Labour might say about granting them the right to do so?

* If you are not aware of how disparate they are, you need to travel about a bit more, I suggest. It's a sad fact that most English people have never been to any of Wales, Northern Ireland or Scotland. Excepting Orkney and the Shetlands, I've been to most of all of them.
