

Scottish bonds: a brave move that's about thinking big

I recorded this in a single take on Tuesday evening. It was in The National yesterday, but I do not think it too late to share here:

As with other political parties, I am more than happy to criticise the SNP when I think it right to do so. But I will give praise when it is due. On this occasion, that is what I have done. This was a radical move, and for that reason, it's welcome, not least because it's a lot more progressive than anything Labour is saying.
