The FT had a headline yesterday that said this:

Sometimes, the truth comes out of the mouths of babes.

B&O make speakers costing more than £100,000. It seems that they chose to use them instead to broadcast their version of the truth.

Doing so, they succinctly summarise why the world is going to hell in a handcart.

Excess consumption by a few, driven by growing inequality, is going to destroy our planet for human habitation unless we change course.

And, it would seem B&O are saying they'd rather that destruction than question their source of profits in the interests of humankind.
