This Tweet includes words that I think to be important from the Irish Taoiseach (prime minister):

...

Extraordinary video of the Irish PM lecturing Biden to his face - Biden who loves reminding people he's Irish! - on why "the Irish people are deeply troubled about [Gaza]" and why "the Irish have such empathy for the Palestinian people".

The Irish PM says: "We see our history in [the Palestinians'] eyes, a story of displacement, of dispossession, a national identity questioned and denied, forced immigration, discrimination and now hunger."

I think he really does reflect Irish feeling when he says this.

But also some aspects of Scottish opinion as well.

And maybe the opinion of many in Wales as well.

But I doubt Westminster focussed political parties will ever understand that when they have not come close to doing so to date.
