Darren Jones MP, Labour's shadow Chief Secretary to the Treasury, has just said on ITX that the government has "maxed out the government's credit card". The crass stupidity of doing so when the government has no credit card, no credit limit, and can always create the money required to pay its bills is really quite staggering.

He was talking to Sussana Reid (who is an excellent interviewer) on Good Morning Britain.

With incompetence on this scale on display, Labour really does not deserve to be in office later this year.
