I suddenly realised that posting about meeting wants and not needs on my birthday might leave me open to allegations of hypocrisy - on the assumption that some big present had come my way.

So, this was my wife's present to me this morning:

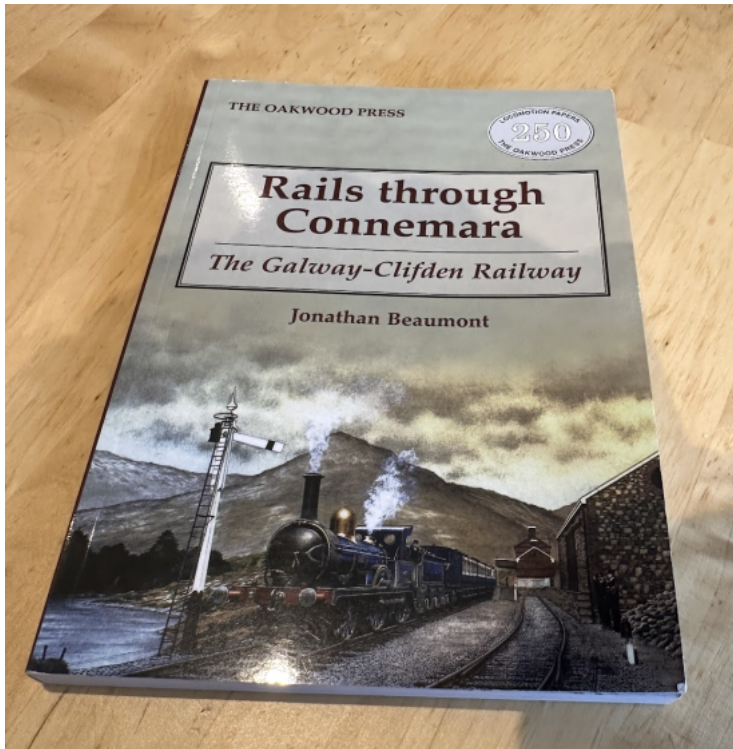

In fairness, I should add this 'extra':

I think it fair to say that she knows just what I like.

When she asked if I had bought myself anything as a treat, I admitted that I had:

I am not sure we're going to fuel growth with these, but that was never the point of life, in my opinion. And I will still be counting my blessings.
