Money for nothing and my Tweets for free

I was sent a promotion by Abebooks yesterday suggesting I might like to buy a copy of 'Money for Nothing and My Tweets for Free', which I wrote and published in 2022.

This is what they linked to:

The screenshot shows the AbeBooks.co.uk website. The search bar at the top contains the text 'Money for nothing and my Tweets for free'. Below the search bar, there are several navigation links: Advanced Search, Browse Collections, Rare Books, Art & Collectables, Textbooks, Sellers, and Start Selling. The main content area shows a book cover for 'Money for nothing and my Tweets for free' by Murphy, Prof Richard J. The cover features a stylized tree with leaves shaped like British pound signs. Below the cover, the title 'Money for nothing and my Tweets for free - Softcover' and the author 'Murphy, Prof Richard J.' are displayed. The price is listed as '£ 6.62'. There are two 'Add to Basket' buttons: one for 'Buy New' and one for 'Buy Used'. The 'Buy New' section includes a 'Convert currency' button and shipping information: 'Shipping: £ 12.04 From U.S.A. to United Kingdom Destination, rates & speeds'. The 'Buy Used' section includes a 'Convert currency' button and shipping information: 'Shipping: FREE Within United Kingdom Destination, rates & speeds'.

This is really not necessary.

First, the book, most of which remains as relevant as when I wrote it, although I would rewrite the inflation section now, can be downloaded free here.

And if you want a hard copy it is available from Amazon, priced so I basically make no profit, at £4.95.
