Wes Streeting was telling anyone who would listen this morning that Labour will get people better quicker so that they can get back to work sooner.

Not that they might better better for its own sake. But so that they might get back to increasing GDP.

Does he have any clue about what real people think, how they feel, and what they want?

And how does he think that message works for the young, the old and those unable to work? Are they not going to be cared for because they aren't 'viable economic units of production'?

The callousness and indifference of his claims sickens me - as they will anyone who cares, which is what most people in the NHS do.

Rarely has a man so unsuited to be Secretary of State for Health so desperately wanted that job, with the unfortunate likelihood that he'll get it.
