

9.45 this morning

If all goes according to plan I will be on the BBC News Channel at 9.45 this morning discussing the Green Party's tax and economic plans.

The last day or two have been busy with the media, even if much has been briefing work. I have been taking to Reuters, Channel 4, the BBC and the FT, amongst others.

Most especially, the Taxing Wealth Report is being noticed.

And tomorrow I start a series of interviews with senior Scottish politicians on economic issues, which they will be sharing. The SNP will be first.
