

Funding the Future

These are terrible times and we need creative democrati...

Published: January 17, 2026, 9:27 pm

A major publisher has approached me, asking that I write a book for them.

The publisher in question and I have only met once, at a literary event, but the reason for the approach was explained as follows:

These are terrible times and we need creative democratic voices.

There's a challenge to think about over the summer, on top of everything else I am doing.