

Funding the Future

A soft landing?

I just posted this on Twitter. It is an admiration of a comment by John Warren here.

Andrew Bailey of the Bank of England claims the UK is heading for a 'soft landing' after inflation. It might be from his intensely privileged perspective. But it isn't for others.

It's not for the old.

Not the poor.

Not the disabled.

Not the powerless.

Not the unorganised.

Not the renter.

Not the mortgagee.

Not the homeless.

Not the weak.

Not the abused.

And not the 'foreigner', even if they aren't.

Oh, what it is to be a privileged central banker.
