More than 400 Labour MPs will now always have it on their record that they voted for thousands of people to die this winter from hypothermia just so that Rachel Reeves could balance her books. The country will not forget their geronticide.

Geronticide is the killing or euthanasia of the elderly. Since it is reasonably anticipatable that the number of elderly people dying from hypothermia will increase this winter as a result of this decision by the government that Labour MPs alone in the House of Commons have supported, I think the accusation I have made is fair.
