

Moderation today

I am spending much of today at a conference at University College, London that will explore progress on the Accounting Streams project to create a new approach to undergraduate accounting education, which I have been engaged in for the last year.

In addition to presenting, I will also be involved in the social media aspects of this event, and as a consequence, I am not expecting to have much time available to moderate comments today. If it takes some time for your comment to get through that process, I apologise in advance: sometimes the day job has to take preference.
