

Of sunflowers, ploughs and cathedrals

Published: January 13, 2026, 5:02 am

---

I was asked on this blog this week if I lived in a rural area.

These photos were taken during my walk this morning. The pictures are as they came out of the phone, although some filters were applied to the last three when shooting:

Ely Cathedral is about three miles away in that photo. The River Cam was to my left when taking the picture. The sunflowers are beloved of goldfinches, for whom it seems they are grown.

We have big skies:

I liked that plough:

In fact, I tried it in black and white as well, and might prefer it:

I think we're pretty rural around here.