

Funding the Future

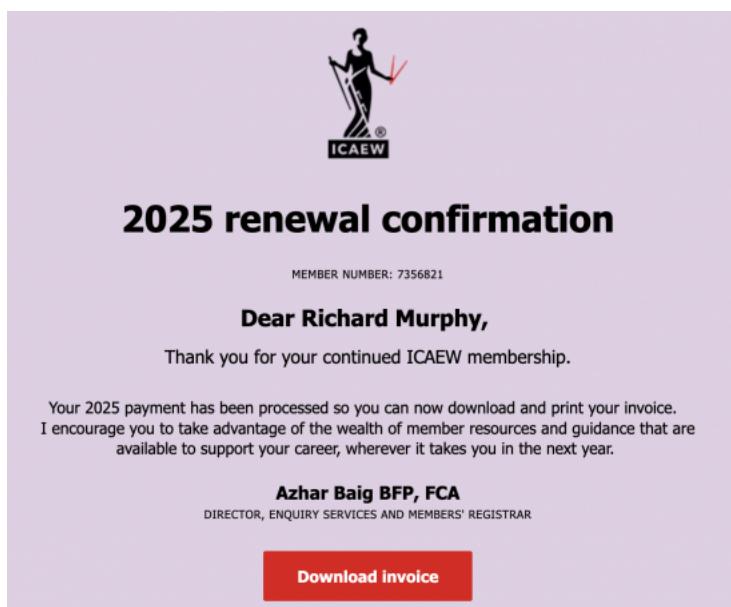

The incompetence of the ICAEW

Published: January 13, 2026, 7:45 am

As many here will know, I resigned from the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales in March this year because of their aggressive, intimidatory and threatening behaviour.

My membership ceased on 4 April 2024.

I was, therefore, a little surprised to receive this yesterday:

I have now asked them to:

1) Explain precisely why this total failure of internal controls within the ICAEW has happened because nothing else can explain this. 2) Explain how their accounts can be true and fair if they cannot accurately collect membership fees from those who might (and might not) owe them. 3) Confirm how many other people have received demands for payments that they do not owe? And remember, these are the people who think that they are fit to regulate much of the accounting profession in the UK, despite which they can't even work out who their members are or get their invoicing right. Is anyone surprised that I feel better off without them?