Defining the far-right and Reform's relationship to it
To the right of existing right wing parties or movements
Reform is clearly to the right of the Tories
Is biased to wealth and against working people
Cutting taxes on wealth
No indication of support for working people and their rights
Would remove the social safety net
Is biased to corporations
Favours deregulation
Is not in favour of accountability
Wants low corporation tax
Does not want to control climate abuse by large companies
Seeks to shrink the role of government
Favours austerity
Wants cuts in government spending
Questions the existence of the NHS
Disdain for democracy
Reform is a company
It is not accountable to anyone but Farage, as is apparent from promotions and sackings
Highlights the role of military power
Frequent jingoism on such issues
Seeks to link politics and religion
Regularly claims the UK is a Christian country
Seeks to control the media
Favours GB News, etc.
Seeks to control freedom of speech and protest
And to control unions
Disdain for the arts, experts and intellectuals
Favours controls on left wing protest
Promotes 'family values'
And the role of the 'wife at home'
Is misogynistic
No MP is a woman
Is strongly nationalistic
Ignores Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland
English exceptionalism
Anti-Europe, of course
Only pro-the US, to suck up to Trump
Denies the rights of minorities
Denies LGBTQ+ rights
Is contemptuous of mental ill health and neurodiversity
Populist in nature
Seems to 'other' groups in society
Picks on minority ethnic populations
Demands assimilation
Is opposed to most migration
Is indifferent to creating fear or causing offence
Refuses to recognise the multi-country nature of the Union
Cronyism
Reform is a personal fiefdom
