

Country mouse goes to London

I spent the day in London today instead of visiting a bird reserve. The Royal Academy was our initial destination, to meet our elder son.

This was taken during coffee in Piccadilly. The bowler is my wife's, who was having a Diane Keaton in Annie Hall kind of day.

I was having a looking like me day.

Our best destination was The Photographer's Gallery, which was well worth the visit. I do not do it justice and have not had time to edit this.
