

Fascists can be held to account

I took some comfort from this report this morning in The Guardian:

The former Philippine president Rodrigo Duterte has been taken into custody after the international criminal court issued a warrant for his arrest for his so-called "war on drugs".

The former leader, who will turn 80 this month, is accused by ICC prosecutors of crimes against humanity over his anti-drugs crackdowns, in which as many as 30,000 people were killed. Most of the victims were men in poor, urban areas, who were gunned down in the streets.

I am pleased for the families of those who were illegally killed. There might be some justice for them.

I am pleased for those who believe in the rule of law: the gun is no alternative.

I am pleased, too, that the ICC has teeth.

Perhaps I am most pleased that a fascist might not get away with their crimes.

There are valuable messages in here in a world where few valuable messages are getting out right now.
