

Regrouping

I think this is a regrouping day after a long week.

Some warblers should be around in their familiar haunts by now. We're going looking for them.

And I have a horrible feeling that the outline of a book is forming in my head. I need to go out and get rid of that idea. One is not scheduled right now, and they are horribly hard work. A long walk is needed to test the idea to hoped for destruction, or to work out other ways to do it.
