The Guardian reports this morning that:

Donald Trump has said he is expecting to travel to to the UK in September for his second state visit.

King Charles is preparing to host the US president and first lady as the UK government tries to bolster transatlantic ties after Trump imposed a series of tariffs on trading partners.

So, a hereditary king, whose role necessarily implies official endorsement of eugenic principles within the UK government, is going to host a fascist President who is intent on the destruction of democracy for personal gain, all to further the supposed political ambitions of a man so sycophantic that he has abandoned any concept of personal identity, if he ever had one.

What could go wrong?

Definitely something to look forward to.
