My videographer, who also happens to be my son, Thomas (or Tom, to everyone but his parents), is on his old university stomping ground in Aberystwyth right now, which makes video production a little more complicated.

This morning's is audio only for that reason. It was recorded and sound edited by me, with a thumbnail I created, before Thomas assembled it in Wales.

He also added the drone footage background that he has obviously been taking whilst there. I rather wish we had not added the wavy audio line, they look so good.

He has also been taking still photographs:

Thomas is way ahead of me in editing skills.
