

Published: January 12, 2026, 6:02 pm

Discussion has been continuous in the Murphy family kitchen this morning.

After discussing Labour's strategy, we moved on to its plans for disability benefit cuts, which it is thought are opposed by 150 Labour MPs who have co-signed a letter saying so. By doing so they take the risk that they might be de-selected as Labour candidates in 2029, not that most of them would win then anyway.

The following summarised our discussion, after noting there are just 120 Tory MPs:

MORE LABOUR MPs OPPOSE
DISABILITY CUTS
THAN THERE
ARE TORY MPs.
THINK ABOUT THAT