

Consider this

Tom B. has written in the comments on this blog this morning:

For anyone reading this and thinking this country has lost its soul, consider this.

A few hundred, to the low thousands are “protesting” migrant hotels in Norwich, Epping, other places.

Yesterday 100,000 people showed up for an LGBTQ march in London. That’s where this country’s true soul is, not the cynical calculation of our leaders or a misanthropic minority wanting to tear it all down because they aren’t invited to the party anymore.

Starmer would likely be very surprised at the turn around in Labour’s fortunes if he actually took action on Gaza. Sadly, it’s not the British people he is listening to.

And nor are the Mail and others who are listening to the few hundred, and who are ignoring the hundreds of thousands.
