

The fun of commuting

Published: January 12, 2026, 9:38 pm

I remembered just why I hated commuting this morning.

I got up and dragged myself to the station, arriving in time.

The train to Kings Cross was cancelled.

There was a (very) slow train to Liverpool Street soon after, but there were no charging sockets on that, and the iPad I am writing on did not charge properly overnight.

So, I am waiting for the next Kings Cross train.

And, meanwhile, the video did not upload properly overnight either, so I am still waiting for that.

I admit, I like working from home. It may not suit everyone, but it does me and regular travel of this sort is something I am very glad to have behind me.

And then that next train was reduced to 4 coaches. So 16 carriages worth of people in 4 coaches. There will be no more blogging for now. Apologies.