I think some readers here may find this interesting:

As they say of their materials:

Ready-to-use and free guide for you to run this workshop in your own group and collective! To learn about the limitations of GDP as a measure of progress - and what are the good alternatives that can complement or replace it.

All the material is at hand and available for a 2 to 3 hours very interactive session, with 10 to 40 participants. With playful games and slides, it dives into: why GDP matters, but also all the reasons why it's lacking; its history; and some of the most promising alternatives to GDP that have surfaced in the last decades.

At the very least, this could start a discussion.
