

Neoliberalism really is rubbish

Published: January 13, 2026, 6:08 pm

I hope that people do not mind these posts where I compare the results for the previous day's polls, because I put those polls up because I am genuinely interested in what people think, and presume that others might be as well.

This was the result of yesterday’s poll on neoliberalism from this blog:

This was the result of the similar poll on YouTube, where, as usual, the number of votes was much larger:

There was strong overnight polling on that one, which lifted the pro-Trump vote from 3% to 8%. It looks like the US right-wing noticed what was happening.

What is clear from both polls is three things.

Firstly, the number of people who believe in neoliberalism who are also watching my channel or reading here can be considered few and far between.

Secondly, there appears to be a broadly based consensus that neoliberal economics is complete rubbish.

Thirdly, I think I can conclude that the series that I am proposing to write will have some use.

Now, I just need to write it, and that is part of this week's work, alongside another nine videos that we already have sketched out for a production. We could be busy, but I am not complaining. I am really enjoying producing this sort of material.