

Right wing equivalents to the fascists of the thirties ...

Published: January 13, 2026, 12:09 pm

Robert Peston reported Michael Heseltine's words to a meeting of the European Movement at the Tory Party conference yesterday as follows:

Heseltine has just addressed a packed meeting of the European Movement at the Tory conference.

He does not show the restraint of most party leaders in his critique of Farage and Reform:

"right wing equivalents to the fascists of the thirties are back on the march: Le Pen in France, AfD in Germany, Fdl in Italy, Vox in Spain and conspicuously Reform in this country.

Much of President Trump's language in America coincides with words here in Europe.

The immigrant has replaced the Jew as the problem which needs a solution although recent events here have cast a dark shadow...

We must make clear that we will never have any part in the populist extremism of Nigel Farage.

We have to deal with President Trump for the next 3 years. we don't need his mouthpiece anywhere near Number 10."

Heseltine spoke the truth.

Why won't others?