

Tax changes everything

This week's podcast was recorded as the final video in a series of videos that I made for the Global Initiative for Fiscal Transparency.

I worked with my colleague, Professor Andrew Baker, at the University of Sheffield, and in this final video, we discussed how our journey through the process of creating a framework for fiscal transparency had developed.

I think that the discussion is well worth sharing because it gives insight into both our thought processes and the ways in which we need to transform our tax systems so that they are truly accountable to us and deliver outcomes that we, as people, expect of them so that tax can fulfill its promise to be a truly transformational tool within our economies to deliver what I call The Joy of Tax and a society where tax shapes the world we want to live in.
