

Funding the Future

Democracy is being undermined, deliberately

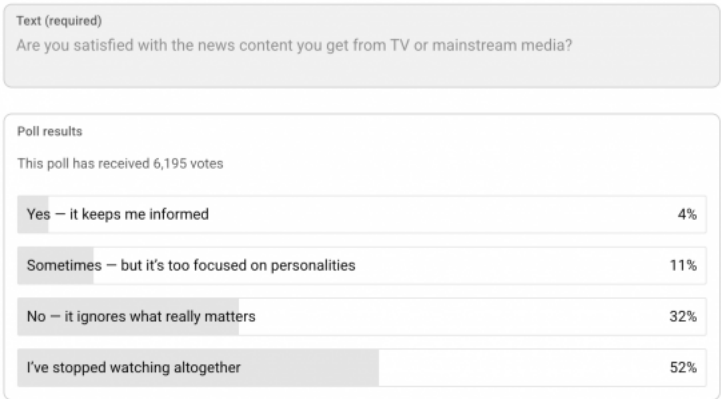

Published: January 13, 2026, 9:38 am

It was pure chance that I put out a video on the media and its news coverage yesterday. It was recorded before I left for my holiday. I thought it was a topic worth addressing. But I had no clue a row was going to erupt at the BBC yesterday. Serendipity sometimes works.

I was, however, interested in the responses to the polls we published. These are significant in the light of the discussion of BBC News coverage. This was the result on this blog:

More voted on YouTube:

The broad message is the same: informed and interested people have given up on the mainstream media for news, knowing that what they get is biased.

We should be very worried about that: no wonder the far-right can manipulate those who are not as questioning.

And the point is clear: we need reliable media back. They are the bedrock of democracy, and that foundation has been undermined deliberately.