

Interlude

Published: January 13, 2026, 11:01 am

I woke late this morning. I can't recall the last time I woke after 8.00. Jacqueline decided I needed to sleep and let me lie in. I think she was probably right.

What is more, nothing I worked on yesterday is ready for publication as yet.

And, if I am honest, I feel the need for coffee and a walk, despite the weather, this morning. It's been a busy week, and I suspect ideas will flow once those two things are done. But right now, even though I know there are a few comments awaiting moderation that need to be thought through before publication, and other issues to address, I am taking a little morning time off. I trust you will excuse me.