

Coming publications

Published: January 12, 2026, 11:24 pm

---

After publishing our Guide to AI and my Alternative Budget of late, we are planning more additions to our PDF Shop.

The first will be a 'Best of Funding the Future 2025' publication, featuring a selection of about 50 of the most popular posts on this blog this year. James is working on this right now. We hope to have it out for Christmas, but there is still quite a lot to do.

The other is going to be a guide to modern monetary theory (MMT). Recent experience here, and responses from mainstream journalists to those discussions, with calls on the issue being taken yesterday, suggest that this is really important. It might also act as a primer for those trying to get their heads around the subject.

The initial aim is to make this another collection of blog posts, but a second edition might, in due course, develop it into something more polished. However, I think time is of the essence right now.

If anyone wants to help on this one, I am open to offers. I am presuming that anything I have written on this topic that is more than two years old is now of little use: I have got better over time at explaining how money, MMT, and their relationships with finance, tax, and bonds work. If, however, the modern monetary theory category on this blog is searched, it becomes clear that this might still require a review of maybe 200 blog posts, even though some could be easily eliminated from consideration. If anyone wants to review those posts and suggest their top ten by title, date and URL, that would be great. Any such lists will, I am sure, influence and broaden our thinking.

---

Comments

When commenting, please take note of this blog's comment policy, which is available here. Contravening this policy will result in comments being deleted before or after initial publication at the editor's sole discretion and without explanation being required or offered.