Yesterday, the USA showed it cares nothing for the international order.

Who will care now for Gaza?

The West Bank?

Ukraine?

Greenland?

Canada?

The Baltic states?

Taiwan?

Who, too, will care for oppressed people anywhere?

And the refugees who flee in fear?

And those who face terror from foreign powers because of who they are and what they believe?

Once, we presumed these were issues we could walk away from. We paid a terrible price for doing so.

Will we have to do so again? Or might some vestige of what we had learned by 1945 still save us?

This is an issue to reflect on.

It is a matter that requires the greatest scrutiny.

It is one where brave leadership is demanded.

Are we possessed of such a thing?

The moment when we found out might have arrived.
