

Last night, in Ely

Tom, who is both my younger son and a videographer, noticed it was a normally clear night here in Cambridgeshire last night. This was taken at f/1.2 for 1 second at ISO 6400. You might have to blow up the image on your screen. Then you will see just how many stars there are. Tom went out onto the fen, a mile or two out of town, to get the image and avoid light pollution.
