

Snow stopped play

I am out birdwatching, although that may not be obvious from the amount of blogging going on.

I am sitting in the window of the cafe at Welney watching what birds there are through the snow and blogging when the snow obliterates the view:

There are around 2,000 pink-footed geese in the distance in that photo, but you will just have to take my word for it. I can't see them in the picture either - but they are out there. So, now you know why I am blogging as well.
